The present invention relates to improvements in a wood fire system for burning cellulosic fiber products such as wood, corn cobs, straw, sawdust, wood shavings and the like. In the past, wood fires have been unsatisfactory because of their propensity to smoke and burn out. In an attempt to eliminate these deficiencies it was found that the inclusion of a primary air inlet, a secondary air inlet, and an exhaust fan would eliminate the smoke and provide a more efficient burn. In addition to providing the aforesaid improvement, the system could be installed without the use of any type of building foundation. With the use of such a system,
