Microsoft WindowsÂ .), the defendants are not involved with any other conspiracy. For these reasons, we hold that these three sections, specifically §§ 1322(b)(2) and (5), are inapplicable here because the property in question is held as tenants by the entireties and neither defendant has any individual interest in the property. III The plaintiff's final argument is that the defendants' claim to the insurance proceeds was invalid because the defendants were barred from receiving a joint "tenancy by the entirety" interest in the property since this was a fraudulent transfer. We first observe that although the defendants do not have a life estate in the property, they do have an interest in the whole thereof as tenants by the entirety. This court has repeatedly held that a husband and wife may hold property as tenants by the entirety, and this right is not to be destroyed by the husband's fraudulent *415 transfer. Branson v. Wilson, 105 N.H. 316, 319, 199 A.2d 449, 451 (1964); Magee v. Hobart, 91 N.H. 19, 20, 11 A.2d 858, 859 (1940). Since the defendants held an interest in the property as tenants by the entirety, we further hold that the insurance policy covering the real estate was not invalid because the conveyance between the plaintiff and the defendants was fraudulent. Exceptions overruled. All concurred.

Specific binding of [3H]CTAP-binding protein (CBP) to rabbit hippocampal membranes. Chalimistatins, a family of neurotoxic proteins secreted by the marine dinoflagellate, Karenia brevis, contain a common cysteine-knot structure. Binding of these proteins to neurons has been implicated as a causative factor of amnesic shellfish poisoning (ASP). The present study was undertaken to determine the specificity of neuronal binding of proteins containing the chalimistatin cysteine-knot structure. Specific binding of [3H]chalimistatin 1 (CTAP) to rabbit hippocampal membrane preparations was blocked by chalimistatin, but not by an enantiomeric structure that binds to another major binding site in neuron, and by an unrelated neurotoxin, brevetoxin 2. The competition-binding curve indicated that a non-cysteine-knot peptide with a similar folding pattern to the ch
