I'm trying to automate the process of collecting and processing data on an ASP.NET application (a chat application) that has a global variable, `public static int Terminal_Client_Id;` which is used to configure the client application (Unity3D) I'm using to talk to it (pretty important, I would imagine). When I create a new instance of the class where this `Terminal_Client_Id` is used, it comes up with a Windows Security Warning saying to "Run this program as an administrator". What I want to do is attach to the process of the server application (since this is a chat application there is no way for me to actually do this, just collect and
