The seven toy soldier represents the seven days of the week. There is only one player. On the seventh day the toys must fight to the death and the winner can choose the number of days he wants to live on the seventh day.

The rules are very simple! In two-player mode, one player starts. When it is one's turn, he must send one toy soldier to play. Then the opponent's toys rush to battle the toy soldier... and try to send it back to the opponent's side of the board. The old "summons" feature has been added, to ensure that the enemy is well and truly defeated before sending it back to the square :) There is also a "finished" square in the current game, where both the players can contest about the real winner of the battle. If the soldier is knocked back, and it lands on the "Kill die," then the time to run out, or the number of times it is sent back to the opponent, is also displayed. So you no longer have any doubt that the toy soldier is either going to be knocked back multiple times or that there is a finite limit on the number of times it can be played. The polarisation (ionisation) of the O3 and N2 neutral radicals formed under sunlight is examined by time-resolved relative-ion-intensity Doppler-limited oscillator (RIDOLO) spectroscopy for the neutral states, using a tunable Ti:sapphire laser. The oscillator pulses (200-250 fs) are focused to a sub-Mm spot size, yielding a broad atomic beam spectrum. The total population was estimated to be about 10(9). Over the entire time-of-flight (0-12.5 ns), the isotropic bands in N2 (N1-1  $\nu_1$ , 1.1-2.8 nm) are measured to be stronger than those in O3 (B-X(3)  $\nu_1$ , 89.0-80.5 nm) confirming the expectation that excitation from red to blue is overwhelmingly favoured. The bands of the pure rotational ground states (

The Troll Trace RPG Engine is a free combat simulation tool that operates at a turn frequency of 30-60 turns. The combat sequences (turns) are extremely short in comparison to other battle systems, allowing play to occur almost at the speed of a real turn-based RPG. The basic tool is an easy to use, user-friendly, and quick-to-learn interface for operating a turn-based combat session. It allows the creation of a random encounter scenario and the construction of any game system the player could ever dream of. The TTRPG Engine is not a battle simulator, but a combat system that allows you to create any game system you could ever have imagined and that is easy to learn and operate at the speed of a real turn-based RPG.

The TTRPG Engine is freeware but the core engine is enough for you to play it without any limit. If you need more stats, more enemy types, more units, more maps, you can create your own component by using the engine with small expansions. The TTRPG Engine is not an RPG simulator but is useful for any RPG that requires a turn-based combat engine. Features: No limit on the length of the combat sequences (turns) and the number of enemy units (thousands) All units can fight each other and even be in the same turn Random encounters are created at the click of the mouse and do not stop to play a battle-movie, they just keeps moving and let you create the final battle movie if you want Completely rewritable and easy to learn and use interface Well-documented and extensively commented classes and components Completely free Save and Load your games System Requirements Windows PC compatible Computer with at least 1 GHz processor, 8 GB RAM Minimum 1024 x 768 screen resolution 2 GB available hard drive space Note: TTRPG Engine is only intended for play by the user who develops it. Sharing it with others is not covered by any license or technical support. TTRPG Engine is not intended to be used on a big server but in a home PC. Additional Notes The mobile version works on all Android devices The mobile version works on Windows Phone 7 The mobile version is a completely different project and is not licensed The mobile version is not updated. It works only with a

Hi ChessLocke Playa. This is a new project I have been working on for several months now and I am excited to bring it to you. The purpose of this project is to share a unique take on Chess with RPG elements. I've used a derivation of Standard Chess for the project, but I've been developing a unique system for pieces. I have now decided to bring ChessLocke to the Playa as a way for others to improve their Chess. For the uninitiated, ChessLocke is Chess with RPG elements. Each player has a series of pieces with unique abilities. Instead of 2 Rooks, a player starts with 8 Rooks. There will be 7 pieces total, a King, 3 Pawns, 3 Knights, and a Bishop. Each piece has 3 unique abilities. As players gain experience points, upgrade those abilities, and earn new abilities, they unlock new things such as new pieces and powers to use. There is no rule that says players cannot have more than one piece with the same ability. Standard Chess movement can be applied to ChessLocke. So instead of moving just your Knights, Knights have a Joust, and Knights have a Speed ability. The King can Joust to an adjacent square like a Knight does, but cannot move like a Knight. The Bishop must Joust to move beyond its initial location. However, the Bishop can dodge any attack that would hit it. Think that Knight capturing the Bishop can be like the Bishop dodging enemy Knights, and now we have a new Bishop with a Dodge ability. Like most RPGs, your pieces gain experience points as they gain levels. You will earn levels by winning games and capturing enemy pieces. Most pieces will have a default level. Knights will be leveled 1-4; Pawns will be leveled 1-3; Bishop will be leveled 1-5; and the King will be leveled 1-7. Leveling up your piece will increase its XP, rank, and rating. The object of ChessLocke is to land on the enemy Throne and stay there for 1 turn. The Throne is simply the square where the Kings always start. Unlike traditional Chess, if the King is captured, the game continues. A Game ends when either the King is captured or a player wins. Once a game is complete, your total experience points (XP) will be accumulated. Players will use this XP to make piece changes and purchase new abilities for their pieces. Players are awarded a special experience-spending point when a
